

A Guide To Decorative Lighting

Lighting is an incredibly versatile tool. It can be used in so many different places and different ways. Some product lighting groups are designed to be subtle and soft; the only element of these kind of products that we want or need to see is the light itself. In other instances, the glow of the light isn't the only thing we're interested in!

Decorative lighting is any light where the appearance of the light fitting is just as important as the light it is producing. This type of light can come in many varying forms for many different areas of the home.

Ceiling Lighting

There are so many ways to incorporate ceiling lighting into a room. Some are recessed and hidden, pendants drop down for more concentrated lighting, but some ceiling lighting is decorative whilst remaining high to the ceiling, cascading light evenly around the entire room.

At TLW we supply this kind of ceiling lighting in several different styles. Our range includes delicate pieces with crystals and glistening glass droplets, whereas others are classic and simple.

The benefits of using this type of ceiling light is that they are beautiful and stylish but do not impose into the room. They are perfect for use in rooms with low ceilings and can be used in kitchens, bedroom, living rooms and bathrooms.
