

A Guide To Decorative Lighting

Lighting is an incredibly versatile tool. It can be used in so many different places and different ways. Some product lighting groups are designed to be subtle and soft; the only element of these kind of products that we want or need to see is the light itself. In other instances, the glow of the light isn't the only thing we're interested in!

Decorative lighting is any light where the appearance of the light fitting is just as important as the light it is producing. This type of light can come in many varying forms for many different areas of the home.

Wall Lighting

Wall lights are another layer of lighting that can be multi-functional. They can add extra bright lighting to a full lighting scheme or, when used without the addition of task lighting, they produce a relaxing and soft layer that creates ambiance in a room.

There are many different ways that wall lighting cast light. This can be through direct light: a spot of light produced to illuminate particular areas of a room, it could be an uplit glow that shines up the wall to create a calming environment, or it could be a fixture that throws light evenly around the area. Whichever look is right for you, we've got a product for it!
